Knowledge Is Power For Treatment

Documenting injuries is important, regardless of how you feel right now

By Scott A. O'Mara
Law Offices Of O'Mara & Hampton

The Workers' Compensation system in California recognizes two types of injuries - specific injuries and cumulative trauma injuries. Specific injuries are the result of a specific incident and/or exposure tied to a worker's employment, causing immediate symptomatology. These injuries can take such forms as vehicular accidents, having something fall on you at work, tripping and falling, etc. These events are readily acknowledgeable.

However, even with a specific incident, there can be a delay in the onset of symptomatology, and that delay in the recognition of subjective complaints is often used as a basis for denial of a claim for such injury because the effects are latent. A good example would be exposure to contaminants in the work situation which could cause pulmonary problems or exposure to COVID-19, but with the effects being seen only after a period of manifestation and development.

The second type of injury is a cumulative trauma (CT) injury, which is akin to the repeated bending of a paper clip until it eventually breaks. The breakage is not tied to one particular bend; it only occurs after repetitive bending. The exposures for these injuries can be physical, but they can also be mental. They can result in suicides, or deaths from accidents caused by high-speed pursuits. These factors potentially can be contributory to medical conditions.

The challenge with CT injuries again – as with specific injuries – is the fact that the effects may be latent and not occur immediately. The exposures are present, but the manifestation of disease or injury may not be apparent until a later time.

These categories of injury – specific and cumulative trauma – may have certain presumptions tied to them, depending upon the occupation and type of medical condition. But even with that in mind, proper documentation of the injury is very important. If a worker files a claim form with his/her employer and misses time from work as a result of an exposure or event, the structuring of the injury or condition in the claim form provides a stronger basis for finding it to be work-related.

A significant factor which occurs is the denial of an injury or condition being work-related. Workers who sustain either a specific injury or a cumulative trauma injury are often so embedded in their career that they do not want to acknowledge their symptomatology and face the restrictions or limitations necessary for them to continue to perform their activities.

The analysis which is done is strongly focused on the exposures, the types of injury, and the manifestation and development of those injuries, as well as the discussions the injured worker has had with his or her physician.

The discussions injured workers have with their doctors, their exposures and their subjective complaints are paramount factors in tying together the work-related event or events and workers' eligibility for the care needed to cure or relieve them from the effects of their injuries and enable them to be compensated properly for time missed from work.

If a worker has missed time from work, the question is when. Also, has

Workers who sustain either a specific injury or a cumulative trauma injury are often so embedded in their career that they do not want to acknowledge their symptomatology and face the restrictions or limitations necessary for them to continue to perform their activities.

the worker received any medical care? If a claim form has been filed concurrently with the event, it tightens up connectivity with the injury being job-related, particularly when the worker is seeking medical care and misses time from work.

An examination will be made as to a worker's diminished ability to work and his/her need for medical care. This candor is at times a medical and legal necessity for the worker to obtain the medical care needed and compensation for time missed from work.

An area which many times is minimized by the treating physician – and certainly by the adjusting agency – is the worsening of a pre-existing medical condition which initially has no connectivity to the work situation. If the worker has a pre-existing medical condition, and his/her employment makes this condition more problematic, that can then be an injury affording the worker medical care to cure or relieve the condition.

Articulation of a worker's aggravation is important. There can be a compensable consequence to other portions of the body besides the injured body part as a result of trying to move about and get around while dealing with the job-related injury. An example would be an injury to the right knee which causes a worker to compensate by using his/her left knee more and more, thereby causing the left knee to become symptomatic as well. In such a case, the left knee injury – a compensable consequence of the job-related right knee injury – would also be considered job-related.

Similarly, if care or treatment is sought for either a specific injury or a cumulative trauma injury, and that care and treatment impacts an entirely different area of the body, the injury to the new area of the body can also be considered work-related. For example, if a worker takes medication for a job-related condition, and that medication creates a new medical condition – say gastroesophageal reflux disease (GERD) – the GERD would then be considered work-related.

The discussion and articulation of events of employment which have caused an injury and the subsequent activities which have worsened that injury expand the scope of medical care.

Some diseases are considered to be insidious and progressive, but do not necessarily create such awareness

Continues on

except by their specific nature, such as cancer. The disease occurs by progression, and the diagnosis may not occur until several years after a worker ended his/her employment. This analysis as to injury - and whether it is insidious and progressive in its development – is a factor which can create access to care for a worker under Workers' Compensation many years after his/her last day of work.

When you become aware of a medical condition, and there is thought that it could be connected to your employment, or to the treatment you have received for a job-related injury - these factors must be articulated with indepth analysis so the examining physician will recognize the connection to your work.

The California Workers' Compensation system has created forensic evaluation methodology, whereby the worker is evaluated by so-called Qualified Medical Evaluators who supposedly have expertise in relevant areas. For you to receive a full cup of justice, it is paramount that you have good knowledge and understanding regarding your work activities, the exposures you have at work, and your manifestation or development of symptomatology, as well as the medical care you have received which may be a contributory factor to other problems you have developed prior to seeing these doctors.

The doctors who conduct these evaluations many times will engage in what are called "catch-and-release programs" - which will involve an evaluation, a review of the records, and doing the billing - with the ultimate finding of minimal or no involvement by the worker's employment in the development of the condition in question. Such a simplified approach then allows them to go on to the next case, thereby making the employer, third-party administrator or adjuster happy.

By having counsel involved, there will be a balance of your understanding of your work and your work activities, and as to the care which can be self-applied allowing you to function. Your attorney can educate you of this understanding so the discussions you have with the forensic evaluator will be correct and accurate. Also, your attorney will review the type of medical condition you have and the possible exposures you have had, and your symptomatology. This information will create a greater venue for you to receive the treatment which is relevant to cure or relieve your work-related injury or medical problems and enable you to achieve a better and faster recovery. ★

Chapter 19, PSU, Update

Charles Roberts
Chapter 19 Director, PSU

With staff morale at an all time low, with inflation on the rise, and medical premiums climbing again our department continues to lose staff to other agencies that pay more and who seem to care more. The surrounding agencies and counties offer better salaries and benefits, they offer signing bonuses, retention pay, specialty pay, etc.

How can this be you wonder? The answer is simple, they have real leadership! The people running their departments, etc. care more about hard working, law abiding citizens than convicted / adjudicated felons. That is not to say, those persons committing crimes don't need or deserve help; rather it means someone has to be here to help them. We have lost record numbers of staff and no one in our chain of command seems to care.

Oh, they hold video meetings where they take "deeper dives and circle back around" but that useless jargon was over used and out dated the second they uttered it. The concept of LEAN held the promise of positive change fueled by line staff inspired opportunity cards and promoter surveys where staff offered feedback but instead of inspiring real change it only seemed to offend their sensibilities.

// We have lost record numbers of staff and no one in our chain of command seems to care. //

As a result we now have a bastardized version of LEAN with top down decrees, audits, tickler sheets, etc. We receive memos telling us to be nice with our survey responses. Instead of seeing how bad things are and doing something positive like speaking up on our behalf, instead of fighting for their staff, our leaders deflect and blame County HR and RSA.

It is true our Chief and executive staff cannot give us raises, bonuses, benefits, etc.; but, they can argue for them. They can support our positions during negotiations like the Sheriff did for his staff. Equally important, they can listen to staff comments and suggestions since staff know where the issues lie and how best to resolve them.

RSA has not stopped fighting for you and they will continue. I strongly encourage all staff to continue speaking up about the problems they are encountering and offering solutions even if the executive team doesn't want to hear them. Just be careful not to launch personal attacks and avoid saying anything that could be construed as insubordination.

Stay safe at work and home. ★

Recall, Legislation & 2022 Elections

770 Bills Enacted Into Law And What You Need To Know About Them

Ryan Sherman
Director,
Government Affairs

As we mentioned last month, the legislature concluded its session on September 10 and the recall election was held September 14. Governor Newsom, as you know, handily defeated the recall election by a wide margin with 62% of California voters opposing the recall and 38% supporting it. Riverside County, however, showed entirely different results with 50.5% of county voters supporting the removal of Newsom from office.

Meanwhile, back at the Capitol, Governor Newsom finished out the legislative year by signing 770 bills into law while vetoing only 66, for a total enactment rate of 92%. This is an extremely high number which shows that the governor is in near complete agreement with the very left-leaning legislature.

Some critics contend that he signed such a high number of bills as part of an effort to ensure the democratic lawmakers and liberal interest groups sided with him in the recently-failed recall election. The same critics have claimed that the governor was also trying to prove his progressive approach to public policy since he will need to rely upon the same interest groups to help fund his reelection campaign during the 2022 general election.

// Many of these bills were significantly amended before they were sent to his desk in anticipation of a signature. //

Many of these bills were significantly amended before they were sent to his desk in anticipation of a signature. In fact, the governor's office was actively involved in the negotiations of how these bills should be amended in order to improve the chances that they would receive a signature.

PEACE OFFICER DUTY TO INTERVENE

AB 26 creates guidelines for police officers to intercede and immediately report if another officer is using excessive force.

MORE POLICE PERSONNEL RECORDS SUBJECT TO PUBLIC DISCLOSURE

Sustained findings of excessive use of force, discriminatory behavior, failure to intervene when witnessing excessive use of force by a peace officer, or participation in knowingly unlawful searches and arrests. Expansion of SB 1421 from a few years ago.

LIMITS LESS-LETHAL FORCE ALTERNATIVES

AB 48 – limits, but no longer bans, the use of tear gas, pepper spray, rubber bullets, bean bags, wood blocks, etc. for crowd control purposes during events that begin as peaceful protests.

CHILDHOOD TRAUMA ALLEGATION GETS LEAST SENTENCE FOR JUVENILES

AB 124 – judges to sentence offenders to the lowest available term if the defendant is either under 26, or suffered any type of psychological, physical or childhood trauma growing up.

GANG MEMBER PROTECTION ACT OF 2021

Qualifies currently incarcerated gang members for early release and eliminates a number of crimes and types of evidence used to prove that a gang crime occurred for future crimes.

RESTRICTS LAW ENFORCEMENT'S ABILITY TO ACQUIRE SURPLUS MILITARY EQUIPMENT

AB 481 – restricts the ability of law enforcement agencies to acquire surplus military equipment from the federal government.

POSITIONAL ASPHYXIA

AB 490 – prohibits the use of certain control holds that may result in “positional asphyxia.” However, unlike the ban on carotid holds from last year, the bill was amended to allow the use of these holds if the life of an officer is in danger.

QUALIFIED IMMUNITY, CREATES DE-CERT PROCESS OF PEACE OFFICERS

SB 2 – establishes a licensing and de-certification process for peace officers to be administered by the POST Commission. The bill also removes “qualified” immunity in state cases for peace officers who either fail to provide medical care to a prisoner or for an injury caused by the officer’s “instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of (the officer’s) employment...”

CLAIM “CHILDHOOD TRAUMA” GET SENTENCE REDUCED

SB 81 – requires a court to consider and afford great weight to evidence offered by the defendant to prove that specified mitigating circumstances are present in an effort to dismiss sentence enhancements. This “proof” is to be weighed greatly in favor of dismissing the enhancement, unless the court finds that dismissal would endanger public safety.

RIGHT TO ALLOW REPORTERS TO INTERFERE/ OBSTRUCT PEACE OFFICERS

SB 98 – grants reporters (and people claiming to be reporters) to access the law enforcement- secured areas / skirmish lines during civil protests and demonstrations. Specifically exempts these persons from PC §148, prohibiting criminal liability for “reporters” who interfere with or obstruct officers in their official duties. The bill also prohibits officers from interfering with or obstructing a “reporter.”

VETO

There was one positive legislative action taken by the governor.

Inmate/visitors “right to visit” sought to create a legal right for state and local prisoners to meet with visitors and a separate legal right for visitors to meet with prisoners. Visitors and prisoners would have been able to sue if they are denied the visit.

Our annual legislative scorecard has been delayed, but it will be sent out next month and we will also provide a comprehensive list of all the bad bills that were either killed or delayed until next year. ★

Calling All RSA Members, Retirees, And Friends Of The RSA Membership

The new and recently dispatched RSA Rollin' Smokehouse is looking for volunteers to help "Serve those who serve" at events to help feed our members and communities.

The Rollin' Smokehouse is dependent on volunteers as it is not staffed with paid employees. Therefore, we are creating a volunteer list for those who want to help before events for prep and during the actual events serving or cooking.

Members, spouses of members, dependents of members over 16 years of age, retirees, and friends of the membership are all welcome to help and volunteer. Culinary experience is always a plus, but not necessary as we will train you to be a culinary apprentice.

This is an excellent opportunity to give back to the membership and community and also gain valuable culinary training.
